

Skin-to-skin is easy

Here's how:

- 1 Get Comfortable
 - Move clothing away from your chest and tummy.
 - Sit in a comfortable semi-reclined position.
- 2 Prepare Your Baby
 - Undress your baby, leaving only a diaper (and hat/socks if needed).
- 3 Position Your Baby
 - Place your baby upright, facing you, against your bare chest or tummy.
 - Keep their head turned to one side with their face and nose visible.
- 4 Keep Baby Warm
 - You can put a blanket over you and your baby, keeping their face uncovered.
- 5 Relax and Bond
 - Relax, breathe normally, and enjoy the closeness.
 - You may softly talk or sing to your baby.

Safety Tips

- Remove scented products.
- Always stay awake during skin to skin.
- Avoid distractions while holding your baby.
- When ready to sleep, place your baby on their back in a safe crib or cradle that meets current Canadian safety standards.

Partners and family

Partners can also enjoy skin-to-skin time with baby. Both the partner and baby will benefit from this close contact.

Other family members can plan skin-to-skin time as well. It's a great way to bond with your baby.

Babies love skin-to-skin contact

Your bare chest is a comforting place for baby to adjust to life outside the womb. Baby can smell you, hear you, feel you and get to know you.

Skin-to-skin contact means holding your baby, wearing only a diaper, against your bare chest or tummy.

Babies held skin-to-skin stay warmer and calmer. They often breastfeed better than babies who are swaddled or wrapped. Skin-to-skin helps soothe your baby.

Your baby's first hours

The first hours of skin-to-skin help you and baby bond and get to know each other. Hold baby belly-down on your chest or tummy immediately after birth until the first feeding is done (about 2 hours).

Keep doing skin-to-skin as often as possible in the weeks and months after birth. The benefits for bonding and breastfeeding continue over time. Skin-to-skin is especially helpful for babies born prematurely or by Caesarean birth.

If you haven't tried skin-to-skin yet, you can start anytime. It's never too late.

Skin-to-skin after the first hour

Make time each day for skin-to-skin cuddles. It can help keep a sleepy baby interested in feeding. Research shows that babies of all ages, including preterm, benefit from skin-to-skin contact.

Skin-to-skin supports breastfeeding

Skin-to-skin contact can help:

- Get breastfeeding/chestfeeding off to a good start
- Improve feeding success
- Increase breastmilk supply
- Encourage feeding in sleepy babies
- Hold your baby skin-to-skin as much as possible
